Who Do You Serve - God or Money?

The words in today's Gospel reading have been called the most beautiful in all of Scripture and the most impractical. Yet, they are very down to earth.

The Lord hurls into our lives a striking and stark challenge. We cannot serve God and mammon. The Aramaic word, "mammon," signifies money that has acquired a hypnotic power and become god-like for us. Money can so mesmerize us that its acquisition becomes an end in itself.

The Lord is explicit and absolute. No one can serve two masters. The devotees of money define themselves by what they consume: food, clothing and homes, etc.. The size of their family is guided by financial considerations. Work is defined only by salary. Friends and family are seen as potential contacts or clients. Social events are opportunities for networking. Even their faith becomes a way to make money. God becomes their supernatural insurance carrier.

On the other hand, if God is at our center, everything about us is given new dignity. Our family becomes a domestic church. Our work is the place where we can reflect Christ's light and truth to others. Friends and families are people who journey with us through life. Social events are places where we strengthen the bonds of things we have in common.

If money is our god, anxiety permeates our life. We live in constant fear that a downturn in the economy or in our finances will cause us to lose what we have. Our sense of self-worth is made to depend on our net worth.

If God is God for us, then trust in His Providence will profoundly strengthen our life. The Lord is not calling us to abandon prudence and sit back passively awaiting divine intervention to meet all our needs. Such irresponsibility has been redlined by the Church as a dangerous aberration called "quietism." We need to use the intelligence and will with which God has endowed us to plan for the future. We are also to trust His Providence that is present in every event, even in the economic downturns we might experience.

To which kingdom have we pledged our allegiance? Is it the kingdom of money, whose horizon is material and limited to the years of our biological life? Or have we pledged allegiance to the Lord Jesus, Whose horizon is spiritual and extending to a life that never ends?

God or money:

Which one truly sets us free? Which one releases our deepest potential? Which one gives our life dignity? Which one lifts the burden of sin? Which one remains with us in the dark nights? Which one will we trust in the evening of our life?

Whether we serve God or money is a choice we make every day.

TIME & TALENT SALUTE

Lectors

Our Lectors serve once every three weeks at Mass. They also attend formation on the Saturday morning of the weekend they are scheduled to serve. At formation, they hear exegetical background on the scriptures, reflect on the scriptures and general intercessions, and prayer together. They then practice proclaiming the Word, receiving and providing feedback for each other. Our Lectors have a deep love of scripture - they serve with reverence and a desire to share the Good News!
